The Rector Writes

When I was a young lad - and I was at one time - we spent family holidays at a seaside village in the south. One of the big attractions of this place was that it had a big rock pool. We called it the monster's pool and there we would spend hours fishing for crabs. The bait that we put on our hooks was limpets and these limpets were readily available on the surrounding rocks.

The challenge, however, was to get at the meat. Limpets seem to be pretty helpless creatures but they have a feature that stands them well - they are great at sticking to the rocks. Give them the slightest notion that you are about to disturb them and you have no chance of dislodging them - they stick fast. Only if you catch them unawares and give them a quick sharp blow with a stone do you stand any chance. In other words they have great stickability.

That is a characteristic that is sometimes lacking in our age. Young people can join all sorts of organisations or take up all sorts of interests but they soon loose interest. Sometimes in marriage where stickability is required it is not shown and partners go their separate ways. And when people enter upon some project or work there can be initial enthusiasm but this fades and the matter is dropped. We could all well take to heart the prayer attributed to Francis Drake:-

'O Lord God, when thou givest to they servants to endeavour any great matter, grant us also to know that it is not the beginning, but the continuing of the same, until it be thoroughly finished, which yielded the glory'.

Now I don't think that word stickability occurs in the bible but it is a necessary characteristic for those who would seek to follow Jesus. One of his best known parables is that of 'The Sower'. In this some seed fell on stony ground where it sprang up quickly but soon gave up on growth because it was not deep rooted. Being a follower of Jesus requires having roots which hold us - stickability. Through baptism we enter on the Christian adventure but a prayer we use prays that we 'may continue Christ's faithful soldier and servant until our life's end' - stickability. Following Jesus is challenging and not always easy - it is tempting to let things slip and not to bother. And people can so easily be put off - they take offence at something that is said or something that happens and that is used as an excuse for not continuing. It is sad that we do hear about the parish the comment, "I used to do this or that but no longer."

Sticking to the challenge - trying to make something of Scripture when it is hard to understand, coming regularly to worship when we don't necessarily feel like it, struggling to put our faith into action in our daily contacts even when we are embarrassed - ultimately does lead to a deeper faith and an inner sense of rightness.

So maybe the limpets have something to teach us - hold on when you could be easily knocked from the course and show stickability.

Stuart Slayer.

Parish News

LUNCH TIME PRAYER

We still try to keep up a regular rota of prayers between 1.15 - 1.30 pm on most weekdays in St Patrick's. Although there is very often only the leader present it does mean that prayer is offered constantly for the parish and especially for those in illness and those from the wider community whose names have been offered. Parishioners are encouraged to attend this prayer time or indeed to make use of the church for reflection at any time when the church is open - 10 am - 5 pm.

COFFEE MORNING 'PLUS' 'PLUS' AT ST COLUMBA'S

Everybody is invited to St Columba's at 10 am (until 12.00 noon) on June 14th to enjoy not just a Coffee Morning but a Coffee Event.

Certainly there will be coffee. Certainly there will be tray bakes, scones and cakes.

And there's more......

- Spot a future investment at a display of work of local artists.
- Spot a future star as you are entertained by our young people.
- Food for the eyes, the ears and the bits below them!

All proceeds in aid of a local team (including Stephanie Allen and Taylor Ross) going to Ethiopia with Habitat for Humanity.

And don't forget to bring a friend or two or three.

FINANCE

To keep parishioners informed about the level of giving through envelopes, the following figures are of interest.

From the beginning of March for a period of 12 weeks, the total giving through the Christian Responsibility Envelopes (the blue ones), was £29,483 in comparison to last year's equivalent period of £27,833. The total giving through the Renovation and Maintenance Envelopes was £10,636 in comparison to last year's figure of £11,826. Thus the CRG figure is up, the Renovation down. This probably results from our making people aware that it is the General Fund rather than the Renovation Account that is most under pressure.

The overall giving is up from £39,659 to £40,119 - a very modest increase. We do of course appreciate the faithful giving of The Finance Committee agreed that one way of increasing revenue would be to encourage more parishioners with envelopes to take out Standing Orders. This would also have the advantage of assisting budgeting and balancing the cash flow over the years. People with Standing Orders still have envelopes and can use them how they wish. Most simply place an empty envelope on the plate with S/O written on it.

At the moment of the 662 envelopes, 70 have taken out Standing Orders.

FIT FOR LIFE

Yes - we would hope to go walking again this summer. A walk - not too strenuous - followed by some healthy snacks in the hall and a short reflection - that's the form 'Fit for Life' takes. We intend to start on Tuesday 24th at 7 pm at the Parish Hall.

CAR PARKING

Secure car parking at a very reasonable rate - just £6 per week is available at St Patrick's. There are still some spaces available. If you are interested or if you know anyone who might be interested please contact Debbie Chestnutt - telephone 2589 1507, email d.chestnutt@hotmail.co.uk or ring the Parish Office, 2564 3741.

SAINSBURY'S ACTIVE KIDS

This promotion has now ended and counting vouchers has begun! A big thank you to everyone who brought their vouchers to the three churches.

The boxes will remain in the churches for another week or so in case anyone still has vouchers they wish to donate.

I'll let you know in due course what new equipment has been obtained for St Columba's Scout Group.

SQUIRRELS

This term the Squirrels have been outside enjoying the fresh air and sometimes they even got to enjoy the sunshine. We have been playing in the Peoples Park and toasting marshmallows in the forest, we even had a teddy bears picnic!

Unfortunately Squirrels will be finishing on 11th June, but we will be returning in September for more fun and madness.

SCOUTS

The scouts have recently been on a joint camp with our Cubs. We enjoyed a few days in Fermanagh. The weather was very kind to us so we had the opportunity to do lots of different activities, canoeing, hiking, orienteering and visiting the Marble Arch Caves.

We enjoyed all the activities and were sorry to have to come home, although a lot of the younger ones were a little tired. We are already looking forward to next year's camp and discussing places to go.

Since we have come back we have had the opportunity to get out of the hall and go geocaching. We spent an evening in Ballycastle hiking and finding a geocache. We will be one of the first Scout groups to achieve the geocaching badge. We hope the weather will continue to permit us to get out more often.

'The Mane Man'

Many of you will have seen in the local press about a young man cutting his shoulder length hair for charity. That young man is Josh Coates, one of our scouts. All the scouts are very proud of him for having the idea of raising funds for a very worthwhile cause and we would like to congratulate him on raising so much money.

Last month we reported that we were busy preparing for our quiz with a musical theme in support of Taylor Ross and Stephanie Allen who, with others from the town, are heading to Ethiopia with Habitat for Humanity.

We were absolutely delighted with the turnout on the night and had 22 teams participating. Congratulations to the winning team the 'Viniculturists' comprising of Martin, Liz, Uel and Joyce. Commiserations to everyone else but as they say it is the participation that counts!

We would like to offer our sincere thanks to the following businesses and organisations for their generosity in donating prizes for the quiz or funds towards the Habitat for Humanity project:-

Adair Arms Hotel, Applecroft Farm, Bear Gallery, Blackstone Restaurant, Dunclug College, Eagle Restaurant, Escape Beauty and Relaxation Clinic, Fruitland, Gloonan Gallery, McAtamney's Butchers (Thomas Street), Mabel at Claire Fulton Hairdressing, Nicholl Brothers, Oasis Beauty Salon at Cameron's, George Orr and The Sitting Room Hair Studio.

We are also grateful to those outside of the choir who gave so willingly of their time to help make the evening a success:-

Lorraine and Sandra in the Parish Office; John our Caretaker; Liz and Les Hughes; Anne and Deborah (scorers); Joan Holden and her team who took care of the catering; Alex McKay (car park supervisor); Derek Bell (quizmaster) who was assisted by George Orr on the raffle.

In particular, thanks are due to everyone who came along to support us by participating in the quiz which raised a total of £900 for Habitat for Humanity.

The Choir is now planning to have a meal in the Adair Arms in June to finish the season of choir practices. The winner of the Fireside Quiz - 'Name the Sweets and Chocolate' will be announced at the dinner.

The Curate's Letter

Misery and suffering anyone?

I enjoy reading fiction. Good Christian novels, I notice are rare. Bad Christian novels are ten to the pound. It seems that Christian faith and good writing hardly ever go together. (I'll make one big exception, CS Lewis, I am a great fan of his science fiction, which is essentially Narnia for grown ups). The greatest Christian novel of the nineteenth century and indeed any century, is unquestionably The Brothers Karamazov, by Dostoyevsky.

Perhaps the greatest Christian novel of the twentieth century, is 'Silence' by Shusaku Endo, published in 1967 and translated from the Japanese. Endo, who was a Roman Catholic also wrote a famous 'Life of Christ' which is perhaps the greatest life of Christ yet written. 'Silence' which I just read, is set in the 17th century in and around Nagasaki, western Japan. It concerns the Society of Jesus (aka 'the Jesuits') a Roman Catholic organisation which is still very active. The best way to think of the Jesuits is perhaps as the SAS, or Israeli Special Forces of the Christian world. Fearsomely tough and educated, if the Jesuits can't do it, no one can.

In the 16th century the Jesuits thought it was about time that China was Christianised and they organised a mission, which has gone down in history as the most difficult and successful mission to a foreign country ever completed. Also in the 16th century, and perhaps less well known, there was a mission to Japan. We can hardly imagine the challenges facing the Italian priests who first landed in Japan. It was then a brutal rural feudal peasant culture so far removed from anything ever known before, that it could hardly have been different for those priests if they had landed on the moon. Nevertheless between 1549 and 1614 the church in Japan was seeded and was remarkably successful. It eventually grew to 300,000 members including some influential individuals.

Japan, as we know, has been historically characterised by wild swings between different forms of government, and in 1614 Christianity fell out of favour, as the Shogun (the ruler of Japan) started to feel it was too powerful and too foreign, and was a cover for western imperialism. All the Jesuits were expelled and there began a period of brutal persecution of native Japanese Christians. Persecution in Japan really was persecution, crucifixions, burnings drownings and acid baths. The Japanese authorities in the 17th centuries didn't take prisoners.

25 years later in 1639, two Jesuits who had spent years in preparation, went back at extreme risk to themselves, to give succour and encouragement to the remaining underground Church in Japan. They also went to investigate a rumour (which the Jesuits had heard, but could scarcely believe) that a previous Jesuit missionary who had stayed on alone doing underground work had renounced his faith after being subjected to the very nasty Japanese torture, known as the 'torture of the pit'. 'Silence' tells the story of their mission to Japan and what they found there.

If you ever want to hear about people suffering for their faith then read this book. These missionaries expected death, and they thought it was even money it would come by drowning or sickness long before they got to Japan, if they got to Japan. And if they did get there maybe instant execution would follow. Somehow they managed to arrive in Japan and get ashore, and lived hidden away in filthy huts, eating scraps and picking the lice out of their clothes, worrying every second about the arrival of the brutal Japanese security forces. Even so they could hardly believe that their previous colleague had renounced Jesus even under the most extreme torture. Apostasy was considered the ultimate sin.

As I read about these brave men and their terrible lives and how they were sustained only by hope in Christ, I couldn't help thinking about the current situation in Ballymena.

Thankfully Christianity is currently legal in Ballymena. St Patrick's is right in the centre of town and has a free car park on site. The main service of the week is on a Sunday, which is nearly everyone's day off and is also at 11.30 am, which means there need be no missed lie-ins (unless you happen to be a a church warden). You can sleep in, and go to church, and be home by lunchtime. St Patrick's demands neither commitment or money although it does encourage both. There's no test of faith and everyone's welcome. Our sermons are short and not too taxing. Yet the church is half empty. Two thirds empty. While there are many people in our parish of robust faith, the contrast between the commitment of those courageous Japanese Christians and us in Ballymena is still very striking. Why is it that some people are super-faithful even under persecution and others are super-disinterested even under conditions of the greatest encouragement?

It may be that as Paul says (in Romans 5) 'suffering produces endurance and endurance produces character and character produces hope'. The more suffering therefore perhaps the more hope. The French philosopher Gabriel Marcel (1889-1973) who is one of my favourites, persisted in writing about concerns like hope, faith and love, which are currently very out of fashion in English speaking philosophy. Marcel is very difficult to understand, and has to be read in tiny chunks, but writing about hope he says that hope, when faced by some difficult force or power, conquers it not by fighting it, but by transcending it, and that very strangely the weaker and more vulnerable the hoping person is, the more their hope is effective.

Marcel says hope is a kind of prophesy, in that it has no bearing on what should be, or what must be, it is only concerned with what will be. It is a desperate call of the weak to the supernatural. To hope is to spring, to leap over a gulf. Hope, says Marcel, is our best means of appreciating the meaning of the word 'transcendence' which is of course the concept that God is utterly over and beyond our world, and a concept which is indispensable to a full understanding of God.

In Ballymena on the whole we lead fortunate lives. Suffering for our faith might mean getting up early to come to the 8.15 am service or having an argument with non-Christian friends or family, but it rarely means persecution or torture. Which is good isn't it? I am the last person who wants to be tortured. Yet the Bible was made by people who endlessly suffered for their faith. There would be no Bible if many people had not suffered terribly. The Bible can be seen as a catalogue of ways in which ordinary people had a terrible time and suffered for their faith. Infanticide, incest, adultery, suicide, despair, betrayal, starvation, torture, pain, every imaginable kind of horror is laid bare in the Bible. Yet the worse a situation the more chance there is for some unfortunate person to use the Christian virtue of hope to conquer it.

I hope that I myself will one day be able to use heroic hope in the face of suffering. But, hopefully, not just yet, please God.

Davy's sudden illness and quick passing was a great shock to his family and the many who knew him from about the town and in the bowling fraternity. He was out and about till just a few days before his death and carrying on as normal. His last days in hospital were particularly difficult for the family as there was no communication. Davy's wife Elizabeth depended on him a great deal because of her limited sight and as well as looking after her in his time he had looked after his grandchildren. Over his life he worked in various places including the Mill, the Phoenix Factory, Michelin and Connor's Pharmacy. He was a keen sportsman and was a schoolboy football international. Unfortunately an injury cut short his playing career. He had a great passion for bowls playing for quite a few teams. He was very competitive and at times because he could be temperamental this led to some difficulties! He was a life time member of St Patrick's, loved his church, was a very regular worshipper and liked to give what help he could while still fulfilling his responsibilities at home. We remember Elizabeth and also their daughter Angela.
